

10-Day Content Strategy Workbook

The Brand Shift

INTRODUCTION

Here's a clear guide to follow if you want to find your voice, create content, and start building your community within the next 10 days. But remember, the timeline is up to you. Whether you want to take 7 days or 90 days to launch your personal brand, these steps are the key to getting traction as fast as possible.

Prior to launching my personal brand, I actually prepared for 7 weeks (I'm a bit of an overplanner, but it worked for me). I followed these same steps, but just stretched it out a bit. All that to say: you're not "behind" if you decide to take it slow.

One note: I recommend that you read this guide all the way through first, then go back and take it one step at a time. You'll get a feel for the overall strategy and everything will make more sense. Then, use this workbook to outline your strategy and gain clarity.

\(Get Google Docs Version Here\)

DAY 01.

Right now is the greatest time ever to live your Ikigai.

In Japanese culture there is a concept called Ikigai, “Your reason for being”. It’s not just your passion, but your purpose. When you live your Ikigai you lose all sense of time. Hours melt away like minutes. It’s at the cross section of:

- What you love
- What you are good at
- What you can be paid for
- What the world needs

Because of the internet, it’s never been easier to build:

- Attention
- Authority
- Connection
- Community

All around the thing that brings you joy and meaning. You can build a brand that cultivates an audience who connect with your passion and personality. You can leverage your brand to create the life you want.

Invest in your brand. Live your Ikigai.

Ikigai Exercise:

First we need to get clear on your idea for your brand. The Ikigai framework will help you do that. The key is to not overthink it. Write everything you can think of. Once you have listed all of your ideas, pick the ones that stand out to you from each category and think about how you could mix and match your top ideas. Pick your favorite combination.

What do you love? •	What are you good at? •
What can you be paid for? •	What does the world need? •

DAY 02.

It's time to uncover your unique story, mission and purpose.

Your story is your competitive advantage. YOU are what makes your content valuable! Nobody can compete with your personality, perspectives and experiences. For that reason, your content should say something about you!

- What's your story?
- What do you stand for?
- Why are you showing up in the first place?

Answer these three questions and you'll gain traction 10X quicker online. DO NOT skip this part of the workbook! I learned that one the hard way. Your story will be the engine for everything you do and will magnetize your efforts in attracting like minded people.

Your Competitive Advantage Exercise:

Purpose:

Next, take some time to reflect on why you're wanting to show up in the first place. If you don't have a clear why, you'll struggle to be consistent. Taking some meaningful time to consider your answers to these questions will pay HUGE dividends later on.

I'm showing up for myself because...
I'm showing up for others because...
I'm showing up for the world because...

Story:

It's critical that you articulate your story consistently and accurately. In every conversation you have, and in every interaction with others, your story should be told clearly. Humans are wired for story, so if you can tell your story well, you'll find that you can more easily understand you and connect with you. Story is the catalyst to community.

Backstory: Set the scene. Who are you?
Problem: What defining problem did you overcome?
Villain: Who's the villain in your story?
Solution: How did you overcome your problem/ defeat your villain?
New Life: What does life look like after you overcame your problem/ villain?
Before & After: Repeat your before state and your end state, demonstrating contrast.

Bring it all together:

I am (Name) AND (Backstory) BUT
(Problem & Villain) THEREFORE (Solution)
SO THAT (New Life)

Mission:

Now that you've outlined your purpose and story, it's time to expand those findings to your bigger mission. Your mission is similar to your why, and story except it removes you from it. The mission statement is entirely focused on others. Your mission is who you're helping, what you're helping them with and what you're helping them achieve.

I/we bring together (Audience) to (Actions Taken) so that (New Life)

DAY 03.

The word “Systems” gets thrown around a lot.

I define systems as simply making a decision in advance so you don’t have to make that decision later. When you start building your brand you should make as many of these decisions as possible in advance so you’re not overwhelmed.

- How and when do you plan to respond to comments & DM’s?
- When will you sit down to create content?
- What day and time will you be posting?

I really don’t believe you need more discipline or will power to start creating content and building your brand online. I believe all you need are clear goals and solid systems. We are going to define many of these variables as we outline your Create, Post & Engage Strategy.

This will outline many basic decisions that won’t be overwhelming to do now, but will save precious mental calories once you get going.

Create, Post & Engage Strategy:

Determine in as much detail as possible your strategy for each of the following categories. How do you want to go about DMing others? Will you DM every person who likes your posts? What are your goals for those DM's? Etc. The more specific (but not complicated) you are the better, even if you decide to readjust later.

Creation Routine: What days and times will you allocate to creating content?
Posting Frequency: How often will you post?
Days & Time: Pick the days and times you will post your content.
DM's: When will you spend time responding to DM's or reaching out to other creators/ community members? How much time will you spend?
Key Creator Engagement: What creators are in your niche that you should be interacting with? How often do you plan to engage with their content?
Respond to Comments: When/ how will you respond to comments?

DAY 04.

Before you can dive into creating content you need to decide on a direction.

Your content strategy will not get traction without defined limits. In the world of personal branding, the person who is understood the fastest, wins!

People trust people they can relate to and understand quickly.

The goal in building your brand is to articulate who you are as clearly as possible. This is why it is key to have a clear strategy for how you show up online!

Meet the KTT method

Known + Twist + Trait = Highly Relatable Brand

These elements will help you stand out! It will allow your audience to align with you, and want to join you on your journey!

Known, Twist & Trait:

Imagine you're a fly on the wall listening in to a conversation where someone is talking about you to a friend. They say, "You know (Your name)? They are crazy about (Twist) and always talk about (Get Known Factors). They are super (Key Trait)" What do you want them to say about you? Explore by filling out your own KTT.

Get Known Factors: What are the 1-3 things you want to become the go-to person for? Ex. Personal Branding, Content Strategy, Community Building
Key Trait: What 1 emotion, tone or trait that will inform the way you approach building your brand? Ex. Happy, Helpful, Sassy, Stoic, Energetic, Learning
Twist: What 1 quirk, unique interest or differentiator do you have that will set you apart online? Ex. Love for watermelon socks, a passion for chess or an obsession with flamingos.

DAY 05.

There's absolutely no way you will be able to create consistently without a consistent flow of new ideas.

But it's hard to come up with ideas when you don't know what to talk about. It should be noted that not all ideas are created equal. The goal is to generate ideas that convert into content easily.

Note:

Many of you know I have a course on this subject that dives deeper into rapid ideation and content creation using the Content Roadmap Framework. I'm not suggesting that here as this guide is focusing on those who are just getting started building their brand.

Once you've established a solid routine of creating content, you may be interested in "pouring gas on the fire" by systemizing and amplifying your content strategy. When the time comes, you can purchase that course here: \(Rapid Content Workshop\)

Rapid Idea Generation

It's time to crank out 20 content ideas fast!

Look, if you're anything like me, you're probably a bit of a perfectionist. Your perfectionism is powerful. It's your superpower, but it must be harnessed. Coming up with ideas is where you give yourself permission to not be perfect. Allow yourself to write down ideas you don't love. Trust me, this will change the game for you.

Start by writing down your Get Known Factors and then write as many content ideas as you can for each one. Give yourself a timer if you find yourself overthinking.

Get Known Factors	Content Ideas: Prompts: • How can people do something, step-by-step? • Inspire people to take action through a story. • Reverse engineer something and show how it works. • What are things you believe that the majority don't? • What are you noticing in your industry? • What do you think the future will look like? • What questions are you often asked?
1. Ex. Personal Branding
2. Ex. Community
3. Ex. Content Creation

DAY 06.

Your profile is a key opportunity to convert interested people into engaged fans, or people interested in working with you into clients.

Think of it as your landing page.

It's where people go to learn more about you and to get in touch for collaborations, working together, etc. Optimizing your profile is key for making the time people spend on your profile count!

Optimizing your profile refers to two things:

1. Optimizing for the LinkedIn platform.
2. Optimizing so people understand who you are, what you offer and how you can help them as quickly and easily as possible.

Optimize Your Profile:

If you are going to be creating content, be sure to enable creator mode, and follow all suggested steps LinkedIn provides under your profile. Go to privacy settings and make sure your profile can be seen by all and is available via search. The most key parts to any profile are your Banner, Website, Headline & About Section. These sections can be tricky to do well and often should be adjusted over time. This framework should help you get a solid start.

Banner: The best banners are simple but describe further who you are and what you do. You may consider a simple call to action. I do not recommend just using a plain photo. Use something like canva or hire a designer. Describe here what your banner will say and look like.
Headline: Helping (target audience) to (take some meaningful action) through (method)
Website: All creators can now add a website to their header section. Decide what link you'd like to use- even if you don't have a website, you should input a simple Calendly link so people can schedule calls with you.	Link Name: Ex. Get in touch Link:

About: Use this framework:

Credibility proof: Why are you qualified?

Relate to your audience: Show you can empathize with them and you know their goals.

Challenge: can you challenge any objections by students (If you think...)

DAY 07.

Never create inconsistent content again with a Content Checklist.

Unless you've been writing online for some time it's likely that whether you know it or not your content will be very inconsistent in tone, feel and function at first.

To solve this I recommend using a simple Content Checklist.

A Content Checklist outlines everything you want your posts to be and become your measuring stick for each post to maintain quality and consistency.

As you create content you might notice more and more what things are most important to your style. Write those things down and it will become a guide for maintaining laser-like consistency.

Content Checklist:

Brainstorm all the things you want your content to look like, sound like or accomplish. At this point don't worry about being a little generic. Write everything you can think of in simple language. Use the prompt:

"I want my content to sound/be/feel _____."

What consistencies in tone and feel do you want to establish between your content?	•
---	---

DAY 08.

Write your intro post.

Your intro post is a key opportunity to share with others who you are, what you're about and why you're showing up.

On LinkedIn specifically, your first post will get additional reach from the algorithm AND from the awesome community who are always down to support people taking the leap into creating content.

Make your intro post count!

It can make a HUGE difference in generating momentum that next to no other single post can.

Intro Post:

You can write your intro post however you'd like. I've outlined a framework that has worked well for me, and my clients. The key is to tell a story that helps people understand you and make people realize that this post is a turning point for you. Take meaningful time working through how to make this post as authentic as possible. Many intro posts are long, the best ones are medium length (130 words).

Write your intro post:

Externalize inner insecurities: What's held you back?

Context: Who are you? What have you been doing?

The Breakthrough Moment: What understanding led to you creating this post? Was this inspired by a creator? Tag them.

Share Your Why: Why are you posting now? How did your breakthrough drive you to change?

Hopes & Dreams: What do you hope to accomplish? What kind of change do you hope to make?

Ask For Specific Connections! To those out there who do X, reach out and connect...

Thank You: Tag specific key people who genuinely inspired you. Be specific about how they've inspired you if possible

DAY 09.

Create 3 posts about the same topic.

Learning to write the same content idea in multiple ways is what separates creators who burn out and those who have massive amounts of content to share.

The reason why is we aren't out to teach everything– but instead, a few things in a lot of different ways.

We want to give our audience a 360 degree view of key concepts.

We do this through iterative content creation.

Iterative Content Creation:

Choose one of your content ideas from Day 5 and write three different versions of it. This is meant to push you. Taking one idea/ concept and executing it through three different lenses. Learning how to do this well will supercharge your content creation efforts. For every piece of content you create you should create at least 2 more versions of a similar idea and post those at a later time.

Post 1: Pick a perspective to use for your idea like: Teaching something, inspiring, comparison, personal story, what the future of that concept will look like, etc.
Post 2: Pick a different lens.
Post 3: And another lens.

Use Your Content Checklist: Once you've written out your ideas, use your Content Checklist to revise and adjust!

Copy & Paste Your Content Checklist Here: What consistencies in tone and feel do you want to establish between your content?
---	--

DAY 10.

In the creator economy, whoever gives the most value wins!

You've made it to the last day of the workbook! Today we are going to tackle something too few creators include in their content strategy:

The power of the free resource. (Hint: You're reading mine.)

Why should you create a free resource?

Well a free resource accomplishes several things:

1. It allows you to go much deeper and provide much more value to your audience beyond (word limited) daily posts.
2. It gives you the option to capture email addresses of those who enjoy your content and want to receive further value from you.
3. It can be a powerful outline for courses, webinars, challenges, etc.

Free Asset Creation:

Spend some time brainstorming about what types of assets you could create that would be valuable to others! These could be templates, guides, workbooks, etc. They don't need to be overly fancy either. Something as simple as a 2-5 page PDF that is helpful and interesting will be super powerful in turning casual readers of your content into fans. After you've come up with some ideas, create a simple outline of what the different sections or pieces of the asset would be. For this workbook I outlined 10 days and wrote out what I wanted to cover on each day.

Brainstorm: Will you create a mini-course? Workbook? Template pack? Guide? Etc.
Outline: What will the loose outline of your asset be? What will it include? Write out a rough outline.
Distribution: How will you distribute your asset? You could send it with every introductory DM. Or offer it via your website or featured section on LinkedIn. Do you have an existing email list? Send it there!

THANK YOU!

You freaking made it! You now have a content strategy that you can implement right now! I hope you not only enjoyed this workbook, but I hope this content strategy serves as a powerful jumping off point for your personal brand building journey!

If you don't know me well yet, you ought to know I'm rooting for you big time. And not just passively. If you need any help at all adjusting, implementing or whatever feel totally free to reach out and schedule a chat! I don't like to brag, but I think I'm a pretty decent sounding board!

Good luck on your journey, and I look forward to hearing about all your success!

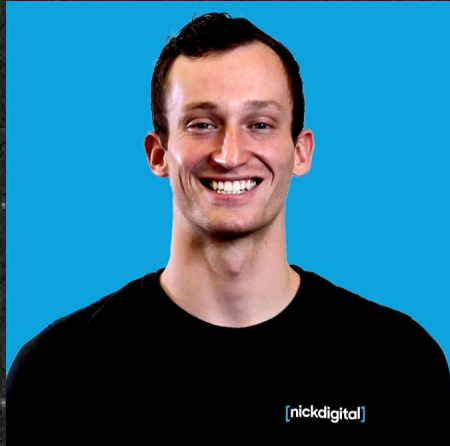

HUNGRY FOR MORE?

You know I got you! Here are some resources for you!

- ☐ Rapid Content Workshop
- ☐ 33 Tips for Building Brand
- ☐ Free Brand Strategy Call with Me
- ☐ The Brand Shift: Personal Branding Podcast:
 - ☐ Apple
 - ☐ Spotify
 - ☐ Web

ABOUT ME

Hi!

I'm Nick Wozniak, I'm a Personal Brand & Content Strategist! (And the author of this Workbook!)

I love sharing my ideas and visions with others and creating community around shared values and ideals.

I deeply believe that building a personal brand is the best way to live your passion, create opportunities and make a difference in the world.

Creating content is the key to igniting your branding efforts online. It's the catalyst to building attention, authority, connection, and community!

I'm here to help you crack the code, and use your voice to achieve your goals.

I talk about how to:

- Amplify your passion
- Find your community
- Craft an irresistible brand story
- Build an online business

Reach out, I'm happy to help!

Cheers!