GETTING THE MOST OUT OF HUBSPOT

Mastering HubSpot

After downloading the HubSpot software, many companies face the same challenges.

“How the heck do I use this ‘magical’ software to generate more traffic and sales ready leads?”

Upon first look, the HubSpot software may seem overwhelming and quite confusing, but with just a little tutelage and direction, you can master the software, and as a result, the execution of your marketing campaign.

That’s where we come in. As certified gold partners of HubSpot, our team here at IMPACT are experts in helping our clients get the most out of the software and succeed in their marketing ventures.

Gone are the days where you stare at the HubSpot dashboard confused and overwhelmed at the thought of getting started. We’ve compiled all of the information you need to learn how to utilize the software to excel at SEO, turn your blog into a traffic-generating machine, optimize your website for lead generation, and build world-class social media followings.

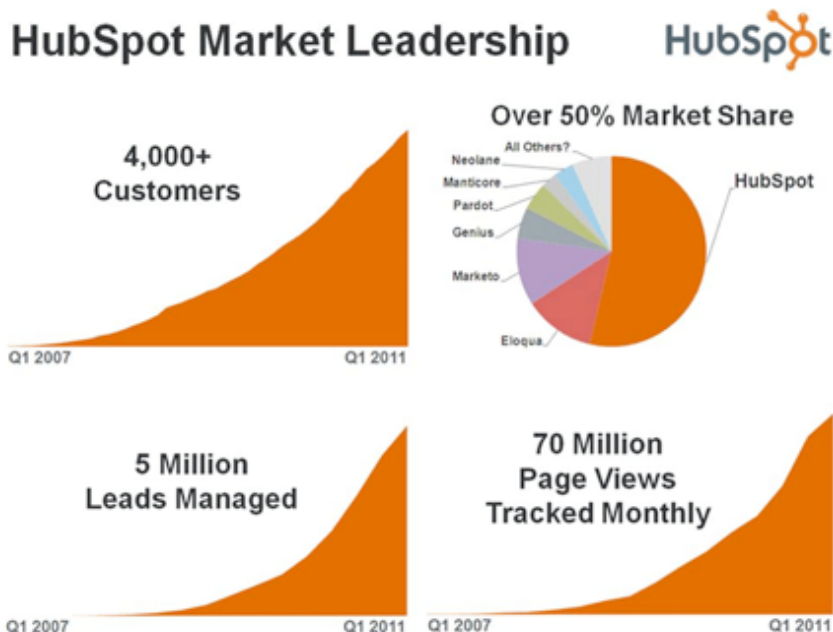

What HubSpot has become known for is the innovative software that they produce that simplifies yet strengthens your overall marketing. Pretty much any tool that an inbound marketer could ever hope for can be downloaded either for free or for a small fee from the HubSpot website. The tools that they offer include:

- CMS and Blogging Platforms
- Social Media Tools
- Search Engine Optimization tools
- Lead generation Tools
- Lead Management Tools
- Email & Automation Tools
- Marketing Analytics Tools

No matter what your level of experience with inbound marketing or HubSpot may be, you can find and use these tools to suit your online needs. Looking to get the most out of the HubSpot arsenal featured in the software?

Included in this ebook is how to implement the best practices for managing HubSpot in order for you to master the software and generate more leads and sales!

Section 2:

MASTERING THE HUBSPOT TOOLS

Keyword Analysis

Keywords are the root of success when it comes to your website. They're important for search engine optimization, lead generation, blogging, and a number of other key aspects of any company's online marketing campaign. As you likely already know, if you aren't using the right keywords with your website, then your online business will suffer enormously.

If you've already dabbled with some of the many keyword tools out there, then you have probably already discovered that HubSpot's Keyword Grader is one of the best (and definitely our preferred) keyword analysis tools out there. Using the Keyword Grader will help you:

- Get better page rankings
- Target the specific visitors and leads that you want
- Organize the content on your site or blog
- Create profitable PPC and other marketing campaigns

This keyword analysis tool not only allows you to find the best keywords for your site and track their progress over time (i.e. you can see the number of leads you generate per keyword or keyword phrase), but you can also check out things like the keywords that your competitors are ranking for. This is important, since you can then plan out exactly how you can target those keywords and take them out from the top ranking spots in the search engines and put your website in their place.

Did you know there's a brand new beta Keywords app in the HubSpot App Marketplace? Why not try it out and let us know what you think? Just head over to the app marketplace and install it from there. Read more about the new Keywords app here and give us your feedback here. And thanks!

You are saving approximately $348.80 per month from your organic search traffic

Show Keywords:

KEYWORD	RELEVANCE	MONTHLY SEARCHES	DIFFICULTY	VISITS	RANK	COST PER CLICK
☐ green roofs marketing	$ - 1	590	66	56	$12.30	$12.30
☐ greenroofs marketing	$ - 1	1,800	66	36	$7.44	$7.44
☐ social media	$ - 1	165,000	77	7	$2.05	$2.05
☐ website	$ - 1	248,000	87	3	$3.06	$3.06

☐ marketing strategy	$ - 1	40,000	72	2	$2.85	$2.85

That being said, it's easy for us at IMPACT who work with keywords daily to say "choose the best keywords". How do you know which keywords are the best for you and which aren't? As you can see from the picture above, the Keyword Grader lays everything out easily for you. You can choose keywords based on the CPC (cost per click) for your PPC (pay per click), campaign, choose the keyword by relevancy to your site, by the monthly searches or difficulty... the list goes on and on. Business owners can then decide which keywords they choose to use based on these statistics, or they can call us up here at IMPACT for a free consultation. We'll discuss how you should be choosing the best keywords for your site and how to make full use of the Keyword Grader tool.

This tool supports all of the other HubSpot tools by providing you with the information that you need to know in order to get your site, your blog, your PPC campaigns, your landing pages, and other inbound marketing strategies ranking high in the search engines and getting found. What's even more important is that this tool will show you exactly how the keywords are affecting your bottom line, and what your return on investment is for each keyword or keyword phrase that you use.

CMS & Blogging Platform

HubSpot's blogging platform has everything you need to get your content fully optimized for SEO and looking good. Prior to publishing or scheduling your articles, there will be reminders on the sidebar of your draft of things you're missing before hitting the publish button.

How else can the HubSpot blogging platform benefit you?

- HubSpot's blogging platform comes with the plugins already built in, so even the most novice of business owners can easily get the blog up and going within a matter of minutes
- You can start up multiple blogs at once
- The blogging platform is fully integrated with the HubSpot analytical software, so you can get great data on your blog from the second it goes live

Creating a blog isn't the only thing that's easy to start up with HubSpot either; creating a CMS website is fairly simple as well. As you've probably already noticed, HubSpot offers a "drag and drop" feature, making it possible for those with zero coding experience to reorganize and redesign their pages as they see fit (and without having to spend thousands of dollars on a web developer!).

The built-in button creator is a great, unique feature, as it allows business owners and web developers to easily split test CTA buttons and images to measure their effectiveness on any given page (again, this negates any need for a business owner to have any coding experience). Above is a chart of different CTA color options that you can choose from to help get you started:

COLOR:	NATURAL ASSOCIATIONS	WHERE TO USE	DRAWBACKS
RED	Increases your heart rate by activating your pituitary gland	A classic call to action color	Might be associated with debt and danger
YELLOW	The first color a person sees	Draw attention to your call-to-action
ORANGE	Combination of aggressive red and cheerful yellow	Perfect call-to-action
BLUE	Professional and widely accepted	ANYWHERE!
GREEN	The easiest for the eyes	Good for testimonials, founder's stories
WHITE	Gives other colors prominence	Make your call-to-action stand out

Tired of messing around with landing pages? The landing page creator is a dream for anyone with no web development experience, as you can create professional landing pages within a matter of minutes. As the CMS and blogging platform are already hooked into HubSpot's analytical software, you don't have to waste any extra time or additional expense on syncing or trying to obtain this important information through any other third party tools. The HubSpot analytical tools also make it simple to conduct A/B testing on the landing pages.

Now you may be thinking, "Okay, so I've started a blog... NOW what?" You can use a series of tools that HubSpot offers, such as the Keyword Grader tool or their blogging analytics tools, to help come up with topics that will not only engage your readers but also help you rank higher in the search engines, or you can speak to one of the many professionals here at IMPACT. We can help not only come up with topics, but also work with you to craft the best blog posts and help you share them among all of your online marketing channels, such as social media and your website.

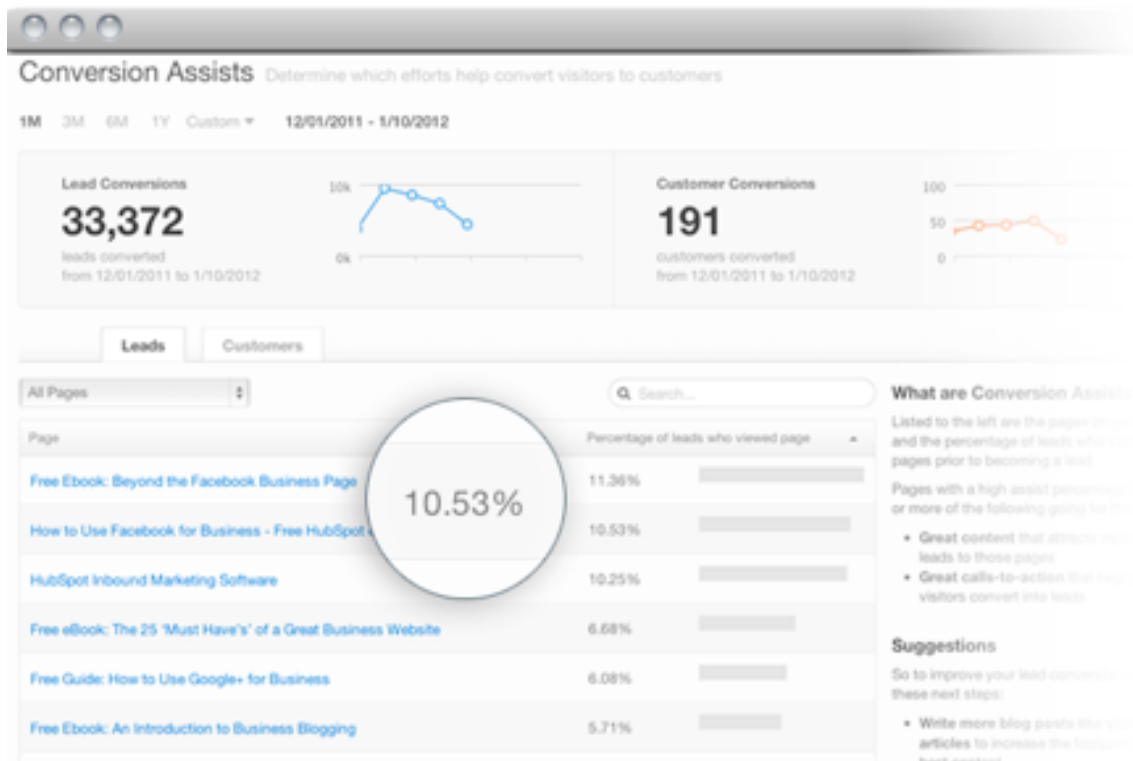

Blog Analytics

All too many of our clients come to us and admit that they "guess" at how well their online marketing campaign is going. Some will tell us that their customers told them that they found them online, and some may even tell them how, but how the vast majority of customers find them is a complete mystery. This is where analytical tools come in to play. Every marketer and business owner needs this tool since it will tell you things like:

- How your leads first found you, so you'll know which marketing methods are working for you and which aren't
- Which touch-points on your site lead to conversions and which didn't
- Which marketing campaigns resulted in the most sales
- The actions that led to leads who converted into customers

Ultimately this information will help you not only make money, but also learn where you should be allocating both your time and budget. You may even decide to scrap a marketing campaign or two, especially if you find out that your Google PPC just isn't working for you, no matter how many different angles you try.

Below is a snapshot of HubSpot's "Conversion Assists" segment part of the blogging and marketing analytics tool. This page will tell you exactly what pages are converting leads, and by how much. When given this information, you'll be able to then start to determine what sort of content your visitors are coming to your site for, whether that matches and is helping you reach your business goals, and then how to support or change those pages so that your goals are being supported.

For instance, by seeing which pages are converting at a higher rate than others, you may be able to start to determine which keyword and keyword phrases are working best for your business, and which aren't. This will help you further fine tune your online marketing campaign.

Landing Pages

We at IMPACT know just how valuable landing pages are in terms of getting leads and increasing conversions, which is why we support the HubSpot landing page creator. Here are a few of the reasons why:

As with most HubSpot tools, you've likely discovered that you need little to no experience with web development to create professional and effective landing pages (and you save thousands of dollars by not having to hire on any web designers or developers!). Everything is "drag and drop"-able, and you can create fully customized lead capture forms, thank you pages, and auto-response emails – no messing around with coding or trying to align your email marketing software with your landing pages.

Your landing pages can easily be matched to look and "feel" just like your website. Not only can they have the same design, but they can also be created on a custom sub domain, meaning that visitors won't even have to leave your site. HubSpot has one of the best landing page analytical software programs out there, making it easy for you to do A/B testing. This is important, as it will tell you exactly what works, what doesn't, and ultimately how you can improve upon your landing pages to increase conversion and boost your ROI.

When you use the HubSpot Landing Page creator, it can be easily integrated with any of their email and lead nurturing tools. What does this mean for you? That your business will be able to send out fully customized, non-generic communications to your leads based on the actions they took on the landing page(s) that they visited.

HubSpot Landing Pages can also be synced with a number of other API-enabled CRM systems, such as Salesforce, Highrise, SugarCRM and NetSuite, so you don't have to use the HubSpot CRM to use their landing page tool.

NOTE: If you encounter any problems when trying to sync your HubSpot landing pages with any other CRM systems, try contacting us at IMPACT or your third party CRM provider as well as HubSpot for assistance.

Wondering why your landing pages may not be as effective as they should be? One of the leading causes behind a poor landing page is the use of ineffective CTAs. To increase the effectiveness of your landing page, try the following:

- Make sure that the language used in your CTA matches the language that's being used on your landing pages
- Try not to oversell an offer. Don't make any promises with your CTA that you can't keep
- When creating your landing page, make sure that the CTA is easy to find. That means making it large enough to be seen, not having it blend in too much, and keeping the CTA in the top fold of the landing page

CTA Tool (With Smart CTAs)

Speaking of CTAs, HubSpot couldn't have possibly made them any easier to create professional and effective CTAs than with their CTA tool (which can be fully integrated with the landing page creator).

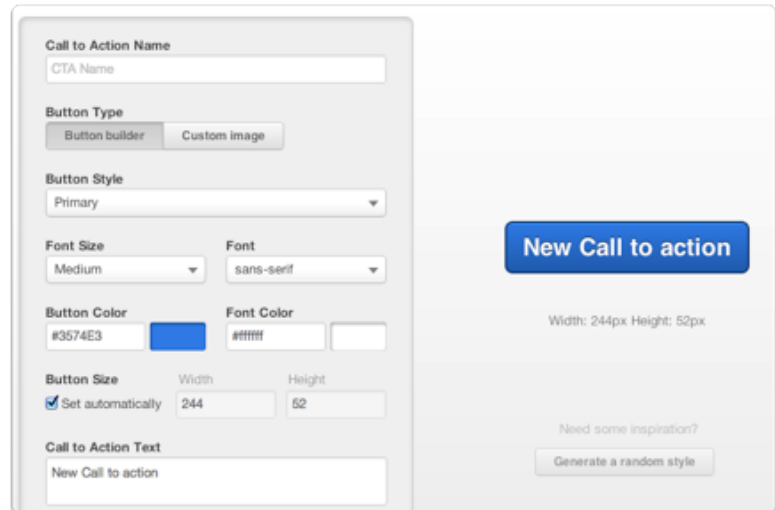

If you're struggling to create the perfect call-to-action buttons, then you are not alone. One of the most common complaints that we at IMPACT receive is that a company's CTAs are drawing little to no action. The new and improved HubSpot CTA tool, with "Smart CTAs", is the best in its class. Here's why we love the tool:

- In mere seconds you can create and change up the CTAs on not only every page of your website, but on every blog entry, each email, and all landing pages
- The CTA tool is fully integrated with HubSpot's CTA analytics, making it a cinch for anyone to track and compare the success of each CTA (i.e. which ones had a high conversion rate)

When compared with the old tool, the new CTA builder is not only faster, but it also has a one-step cross-platform editing tool which really simplifies the process. If you're a business owner who's already tight on time, you'll certainly appreciate this. It also features better image management and as we mentioned before, allows you to change up the CTAs in your emails tool, something which the old tool didn't allow for. When changing your CTAs, keep some of these tips in mind:

- Use direct language that tells visitors exactly what they can expect when they click on your CTA button (avoid vague language)
- Explain why your CTA is worth their time (i.e. provide a stat that helps support the need for a visitor to click on the CTA)
- Go through each page of your website and determine where that page is appropriate in a lead's buying cycle. Once that's determined, make sure
- that the CTA placed on the page matches where a lead would likely be in the buying cycle (i.e. a visitor who's found your site using the keywords "how to unclog a sink" would be interested in a CTA for a free "do it yourself" sink declogging white paper download, and wouldn't likely click on a CTA such as "Click here to check out our services").

A lot of companies are forgetting the importance of having CTAs, but having effective CTAs allows visitors to convert into leads, and leads into customers. CTAs are often the missing link between having traffic simply be "traffic" and converting visitors, but this tool makes it simple for anyone to create great CTAs that will start increasing conversions in a short matter of weeks. If you want to see a higher ROI and are struggling when coming up with effective CTAs, give us a call here at IMPACT.

We craft effective CTAs that significantly increase our client's ROI right from the design, to the placement, to the wording. We'll also provide you with the tools you need to track and monitor the success of your CTAs so that you can continue to fine tune and change them in the future.

A lot of clients come to us here at IMPACT absolutely mystified by the whole SEO "thing", and the HubSpot Page Performance Tool is one tool that we often use to help explain exactly what on-page SEO is and what each business owner needs to be reviewing and checking on his or her website to ensure that their site is ranking as high as it should.

The Page Performance Tool will:

- Check a page's title, ensuring that it's properly tagged and that it is of a good character length (for example, you never want your headline to exceed 70 characters)
- Review any meta descriptions and ensure that they aren't too long, that they're unique, and that it doesn't contain the page title
- Ensure that header tags are optimized (i.e. that H1, H2, etc. tags are being utilized)
- Make sure that all Alt Tags for images are included (having Alt Tags can be one of the quickest and easiest ways to increase your SEO)
- Grade you on your page's link anchor text

All of the above “check points” are necessary to ensure that your page is getting the best exposure possible. This tool, as with all other HubSpot tools, is fully integrated with other HubSpot tools. The tracking code (primarily for keyword tracking) and the CTA code make it easy for business owners and web developers to track the success of every aspect of the page, allowing people like yourself to make decisions on what needs to be changed, what doesn’t, and where the most (and least) conversions are coming in from.

The HubSpot Keyword Grader tool is also a “must have” as it works perfectly in conjunction with the Page Performance tool. Most of our clients find that using both tools alone can significantly improve both their understanding of how well their online marketing campaign is working, and their ROI.

While the Page Performance tool will answer several of the questions that you may have about the effectiveness of any given web page, it can be easy to get caught up in the data provided and feel a bit lost in the details. Our suggestion to our clients is to always start from the top to the bottom, meaning to start with the page title, then move to the meta description, and so on.

Some additional tips:

- To get a good “grade” on your page, make sure that you include your keyword phrase.
- If you use a different CRM, you can usually include the HubSpot tracking code to any website by logging into HubSpot, clicking on “Settings” and then clicking on “External Site Traffic Logging”. You can then copy the code from the HubSpot tracking pages and then past the tracking code in before the `</body>` tag on your page.

If you need any additional help with your Page Performance tool, or need any help with further optimizing your page, give us here at IMPACT a shout for a free consultation.

Link Grader

The clients that we have who have never been involved with inbound marketing before are often perplexed by “inbound links”. Inbound links are incredibly important to your site’s ranking in search engines. Depending on the “quality” of the link that you receive from a visitor, your site can receive a “vote” which tells search engines like Google and Bing that yes, your site is a credible, quality website that’s worth a high page rank.

Unless you’ve invested a lot of time in online marketing courses or have studied the subject, you may have a hard time with actually being able to see which links are “good” and which aren’t – that is, until the HubSpot Link Grader was released. This tool really gives our clients a good understanding of how valuable the links that you are receiving are, whether it’s from visitors, from other people linking to you, and how many leads you’ve gotten from those sites that are linking to you. You can even see the anchor text of the link so that you can further work with the website to improve that link and get more “clicks”.

As with everything HubSpot, along with the tools comes important analytical data that you want and need that will allow you to not only see how many new links you've gotten and how you're improving, but it also will help you spot new opportunities to get more inbound links too.

For example, if one page in particular isn't driving in the inbound links, you can either choose to invest more time into optimizing and advertising that page to increase the amount of inbound links you get, or choose to ditch it altogether. Or seeing that you're receiving a ton of links from one site (particularly if you run more than one page for a product, such as if you're an affiliate marketer) may help you determine when to increase the push to sell more of a particular product or service.

Another great benefit to this tool is that seeing which web pages are getting more quality links can often help you determine what you've done "right" with one page, and where other pages can use some improvement.

Be on the look out for things like which CTAs you're using, how a particular page is being promoted on your social media networks and blogs, as well as the web page design. If you feel that you need a second or third or tenth set of eyes to help you create the best pages possible, grab an associate or contact us at IMPACT for help on how to increase your ROI.

Social Media Tools

One question that a lot of our clients here with IMPACT ask is, “How can we measure the success of our social media campaigns?”

Sure, you can see how many “likes” or “shares” a Facebook post, or maybe you can dig around and find out how many times a message you posted was retweeted, but if you really want to get the hardcore stats on how much traffic and how many conversions you got as a result of your social media endeavors, then you’ve made the right choice by choosing the HubSpot Social Media Tools.

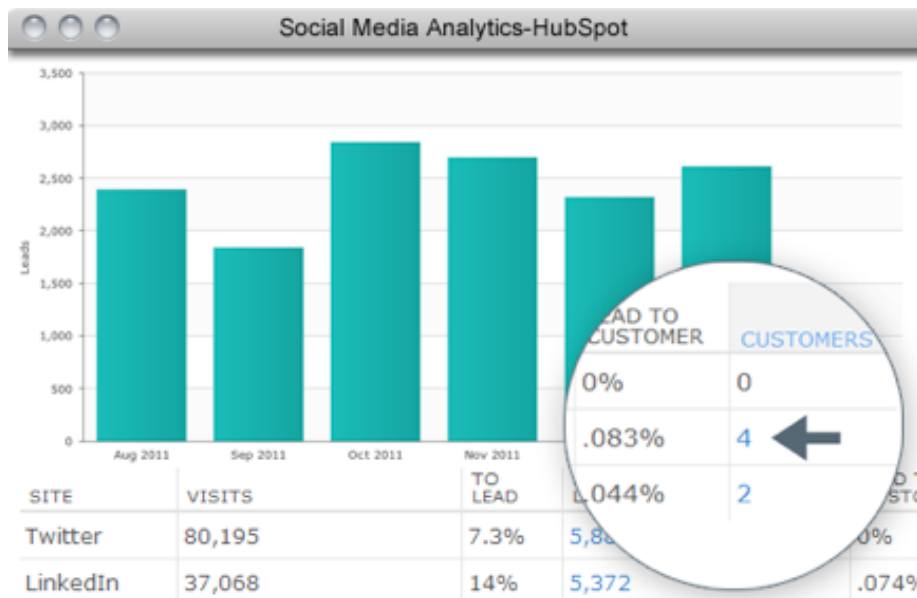

There are four core benefits to these tools:

- You can easily see whenever your company has been mentioned on a number of different social media networks, making it easy for you to
- monitor conversions to see if you need to put out any fires about a concern a customer have, thank someone for a compliment, or answer a lead’s pressing question about a product. This is a great PR management tool.
- You can start measuring the ROI of your different social media accounts. You can see how much traffic is coming through to each of your social media sites, how many converted to leads, and how many converted to customers. This will help you decide which social media channels deserve more time, and which you can spend less time on.
- You can easily schedule for posts to be made on a regular basis. Not only will this have people come to expect to receive new news from you at regular times each day, but it can also save you the expense of hiring on an employee devoted to your social media campaigns.

- All of your social media “blasts” can be sent at once. Forget wasting your
- time by logging into Facebook, Twitter, LinkedIn, Google+ (and so on and so on) individually; HubSpot allows you to quickly log in from one central port.

To set up the HubSpot Social Media tool for the first time, open it up and, under the “Promote” tab, click on “Social Media”. Next, click on the “Get Started” link and then move to the “Social Media Accounts” link. This will allow you to add all of your social media accounts to the tool. To change up how HubSpot interacts with each of your social media sites, simply check off each action under each profile (i.e. Reach, Blog Auto Publish, Social Media Publish and Follow Me).

HubSpot can provide you with the statistical information, but it’s really going to be up to you to determine what you’re doing right and what can be improved upon. Think about the type of content that you’re posting on your social networking sites. Look into what type of content is performing better than others. The performance of your content may depend on a number of things, such as:

- How you presented that content on your social media site (i.e. what wording did you use, and was it effective)
- Who your target market is (and whether or not you're targeting the right people!)
- Whether or not your content is engaging, or if it needs a bit of an overhaul

HubSpot's CMS makes it easy to update and change any content that you may have, and you can then easily re-share or retweet any of that content through their social media tools. Try this with a couple of blog articles or landing pages and see if there's any change in the interest. If you see no change, or if your content seems to be performing even worse, give us a call here at IMPACT. We'll be able to get your social media campaign right back on track and have it helping your business rather than hindering it.

Prospect Intelligence

If you want to know who's checking out your blog or your website without them even having to fill out a form, then you made the right choice by downloading the HubSpot Prospect Intelligence tool. This tool will tell you exactly who's visiting your site and why they came to your site in the first place. When armed with this information, business owners can then start making adjustments on their site to see how they can convert these prospects into leads.

Prospects
Monitor which companies are visiting your site

Name	Pages Seen	Visitors	Lead
Microsoft Corp.	211	99	17
New York Times Co.	148	45	13
Exxon Mobil	250+	123	10
Salesforce	70	20	1

Every person who visits your site will produce a report that will tell you exactly how each visitor found your site (through landing pages, PPC, your blog, social media, through search), which will give you a better understanding of why that particular visitor came to your site, and why or why not they converted into a lead or a customer. You'll also be able to see what pages they visited, which will give you a better idea of what they wanted from your site.

For example, they may have come to your site to check out a particular product, or they may have come to your site to read a blog article you posted on do it yourself home maintenance. Not only can you see what they're interested in, but it will also give you a better understanding of where they are in the buying cycle, meaning that you'll have a better idea of what kind of a sales plan you should be creating to convert that particular visitor.

Having all of this visitor demographic information not only helps you create a better lead nurturing program for one particular lead, but it will help you develop a campaign that will work for all of your leads.

Over time, you'll start to notice certain "trends" in the type of leads you get coming through to your site. For instance, in time you may find that leads who use the keyword phrase "dog training in Boston" are further along in the buying cycle than leads who use the keyword phrase "teaching a dog to sit". You can then create more customized and more effective lead nurturing campaigns, all of which can be fully automated with HubSpot, which will increase your conversions.

Oh, and as all HubSpot tools are fully integrated with their top notch email system, any information that you obtain about any visitors, leads and customers can quickly and easily be emailed, exported, and shared with anyone in your company. Time saved is money saved, and these tools will definitely save you a ton of time.

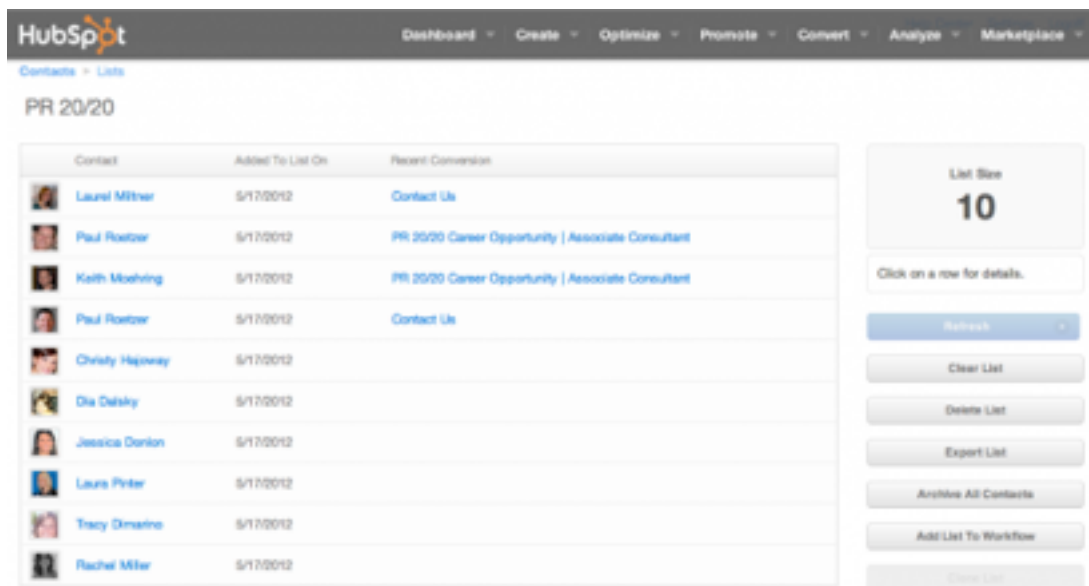

Contact Manager (with Timeline)

If there's a piece of wisdom that we at IMPACT want to impart unto all companies out there, it's that every business needs to properly manage their leads. Failure to do so will mean to a decrease in sales, an increase in wasted time, and overall inefficiency that needlessly takes business owners and other people who are part of the company away from other more important tasks.

HubSpot's Contact Manager makes it easy for anyone to maintain all leads, as it keeps them all in one central location and provides important lead intelligence information (i.e. pages viewed by lead, lead score, conversions, revisit notifications, etc.). What does this mean for you? An easier time when it comes to creating and sending lead nurturing and sales emails. HubSpot's Contact Manager makes it easy for anyone to segment their leads and send out appropriate lead nurturing messages, all within minutes. And of course, as one should expect, the Contact Manager can be easily integrated with the HubSpot CRM (or any other third party CRM, like salesforce.com).

When segmenting your leads, here are some things to think about:

- A lead's demographics (i.e. where are they physically located? Does this allow for any in-person marketing or sales opportunities? Can you send out localized emails?)
- A lead's social behavior (how does a lead prefer to contact you – through

The screenshot shows the HubSpot Contact Manager interface. At the top, there's a navigation bar with the HubSpot logo and tabs for Dashboard, Create, Optimize, Promote, Convert, Analyze, and Marketplace. Below this, the 'Contacts' tab is selected, showing a list of contacts. The list has columns for Contact, Added To List On, and Recent Conversion. The list size is indicated as 10. On the right side, there are buttons for 'Click on a row for details', 'Refresh', 'Clear List', 'Delete List', 'Export List', 'Archive All Contacts', 'Add List To Workflow', and 'Close List'.

- A lead's interaction on your website (What sort of offers are they downloading? What pages are they visiting – your blog or your product/service pages?)
- When a lead came to your site (i.e. if a ton of leads came to your site during a "Black Friday" sale or during Christmas, consider sending targeted emails or messages to those leads based on that particular event or season.)

Email Marketing

We here at IMPACT strongly believe that email marketing is an integral part of any lead nurturing campaign. While a lot of other inbound marketing agencies are telling their clients that email marketing is no longer effective, we know better. If you're looking to get your email marketing campaign off the ground, or you're looking for ways to boost your lead nurturing campaign and increase conversions, then IMPACT and HubSpot can help.

This year, HubSpot released a completely revised email software and marketing database, making it easier for business owners and companies to keep track of both leads and the emails that they were sending out.

The centralized database makes it simple for all of your leads to be stored in the same place, and for your email marketing campaign to be fully integrated with your CRM – making it easy for you to keep track of analytical information as well. You will also find out things like:

- A contact's online browsing history
- Emailing history
- Any form submissions
- Social media information

All of these things make it easy for us here at IMPACT to show business owners exactly how they can segment and target leads. We can help you import and integrate all of your databases into HubSpot, or to other CRMs, and with the use of HubSpot's software we will help you tailor the perfect emails that will guide your leads right along the sales process to the point that they are ready to commit to purchasing your product or service.

Want to get your email marketing campaign off on the right foot? Then start off by creating great CTAs with the HubSpot CTA tool. Every good email should have a clear call to action that not only makes it easy for a reader to determine what the purpose of the email is, but that also makes sense to where the lead is in the buying cycle (which is easy to determine with the HubSpot Prospect tool). Make sure that your email design matches the branding of your company and site, and use the Email Marketing tools to include a lead's name any other helpful demographic information to customize the email. This will increase both its open and CTR (click through rate).

TIP: What we really like about the email marketing tool is that it can help determine where a lead is in the buying cycle and send out emails based on a lead's actions or behaviors online. It can then send out an email based solely on those actions, further enhancing your email marketing campaign and increasing your odds of converting that lead.

Workflows

Speaking of email marketing, HubSpot has recently released a new tool that we at IMPACT are particularly excited about, the new HubSpot Workflows tool. This tool allows you to create finite segmented lead lists that allow you to really target and customize your sales process specific to people of different demographics, niches, industries, and even email addresses. The result: an increase in conversions. Why? Because the more personalized an email seems to be to an individual, the more they'll bother to read it and take notice. That means an increase in interest, an increase in CTRs (click through rates), and an increase in conversions.

A lot of our clients think that email marketing is some incredibly time consuming process, but this doesn't have to be the case. As with all of HubSpot's tools, Workflows can be fully automated by choosing which emails are sent when a visitor completes a certain action (i.e. if a visitor filled out a certain form, downloaded a particular white paper, etc), and then email messages, delays, and other actions can be added.

Within a matter of weeks you can be seeing an increase in conversion rates simply because Workflows has allowed you to create a more intuitive, robust email campaign. What's even better is that Workflows isn't just about enhancing your email marketing campaign; it works with several other HubSpot tools too.

For instance, with Workflows, you can easily change a lead's placement in the buying cycle if they take a certain action, such as watching a video that accompanies one of your products, or downloads an eBook. All it takes is a click of a mouse.

A lot of our clients are pretty apprehensive about changing a lead's placement in the buying cycle at first, but don't be. Test it out, see what happens over a period of time. You may choose to change a lead's placement based on a particular video that they view on your site. See what happens when you move them further along the buying cycle, such as after they view a product video, send out a promotional email that offers 30% off that particular product or service. You may be surprised by the increase in conversions that you receive.

Make use of the resources around you too to help increase your lead nurturing campaign, like reaching out to similar-minded business owners on LinkedIn or contacting us here at IMPACT for a free consultation. The help you can receive just by asking a few questions can save you months if not years of testing and discovering what others already know and be able to share.

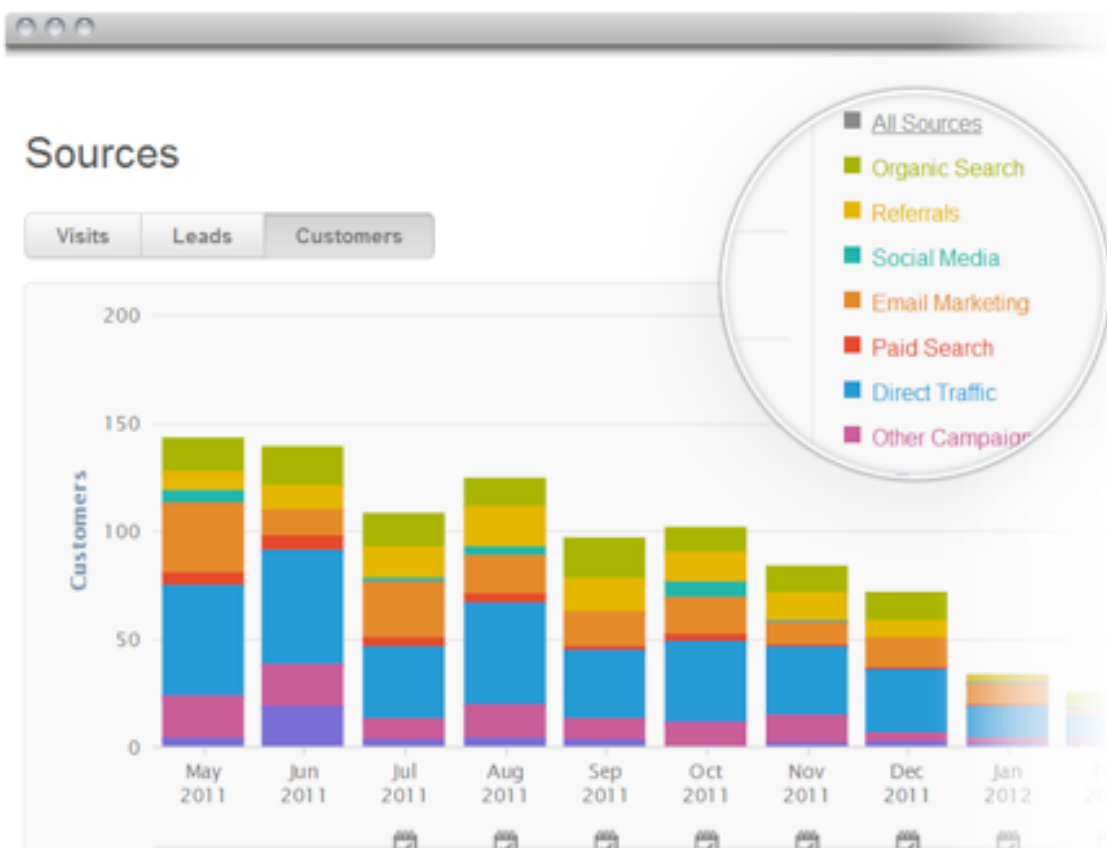

Sources

Obviously knowing exactly how leads and customers are finding your site is important. Once you know exactly what's bringing in the traffic, then you can start to focus more on the channels that are bringing in traffic and conversions, and decide whether to improve upon or ditch those channels that just don't seem to be producing results.

We at IMPACT encourage our clients to use tools like HubSpot's Sources to learn exactly how people are finding their websites so that they know which channels are worth investing in and which are worth ditching.

As with the HubSpot Social Media Tool, Sources will tell you exactly how many customers came through to your site through your social media sites like Facebook and Twitter. What's also great about this tool is that you can integrate your online efforts with your offline efforts so that you get a crystal clear picture of which channels are bringing in your best leads and customers.

But here's a question that we get a lot: how do you really know whether or not a particular channel is worth investing more time and money in to improve, and when you should stop investing in it? The first thing that you have to think about are your business objectives: how important is this particular page or marketing channel to you obtaining your company's goals? Have your goals changed?

As your website grows, you may be surprised to find through HubSpot CMS that you have one or several similar pages on your site. Is the page essentially a duplicate of one or several other pages, so its become redundant? And how would improving that page add any value to your site? Ask the same questions about other marketing channels, like your PPC campaign or landing pages. If it adds no value and is now duplicated content and bringing in less or no leads and conversions, it's probably a good idea to get rid of it.

TIP: Social media is one source that you should never eliminate from your inbound marketing repertoire. If you're finding yourself struggling with your social media campaign, pop open the HubSpot Social Media tool and give us a call here at HubSpot. We'll get your campaign back on track.

Marketplace

There's no question that accessing the web through mobile devices like iPhones, Androids and tablets is where it's at. HubSpot's no fool, and has gotten right in on this trend by creating the HubSpot "Marketplace", a one-stop app shop for all of your marketing needs.

Here's what we really like about the marketplace: it's not all about HubSpot. As a matter of fact, most of the apps created are all created by third party inbound marketing professionals who want to help YOU. It's almost as if you're hiring on the best marketers in the world, except you get all of the information quickly and easily through one little app. Or, you can visit their "Service Marketplace" section and check out several HubSpot certified partners, like us here at IMPACT, to help you with your project.

If you need help with overcoming your writer's block, there's an app for that (try Writer's Access Content Platform). Want help in closing your leads and getting more sales? There's an app for that too (give "Close My Leads" a shot). Poke around and you'll come across some other cool apps, like the "Vocalize Widget" that will allow readers to "listen" to your blogs rather than read them.

All apps are supported by third party developers, but you can easily get further assistance with any app you download by visiting the App Details page and by clicking on the “Support” section. Click on “App Help” and you’ll then be able to “Email Developer” for further support.

What Does It Cost?

HubSpot currently has three different plans that businesses can choose from:

- Basic
- Professional
- Enterprise

The actual price that a company pays depends on a number of factors, such as how many contacts a web page receives a month as well as the plan that they choose. For a more detailed list of their different prices, click here.

Working With A Certified HubSpot Partner

HubSpot didn't choose us; we chose them! We at IMPACT have tested and tried a number of different analytical tools online and haven't been nearly as satisfied with any of them as we have been with HubSpot. Once we started using the HubSpot tools, we were hooked and so we took a certification exam which allows us to now tell our clients that we are a HubSpot Certified Gold Partner.

What does it mean for us here at IMPACT to be a certified gold partner? It shows that we are a team that's dedicated to inbound marketing. It shows that we understand and follow the most effective and up to date trends of inbound marketing in existence today. It shows that we know the tools that HubSpot offers inside and out, and know how to use these tools to give you, our clients, the best ROI possible with these tools.

IMPACT Can Help You

Wondering if IMPACT is the right fit for your company? Then check out an interview with Chris Ahlgren from Ahlgren Landscaping and learn about how we were able to help increase his website's traffic, page views, and the time that visitors are spending on his site. Since we began working with Chris, he's found that his sales have significantly increased – all thanks to inbound marketing.
